

Waterkloof Air Force Base Upgrades Security

Pentagon Distribution are the proud suppliers of CCTV equipment for a new state-of-the-art intruder detection system at Waterkloof Air Force Base.

Waterkloof, situated near Pretoria, is an operational military air base. The busiest air base of the South African Air Force (SAAF), it is home to a number of squadrons including the 21 Squadron - the VIP air transport unit that operates the Presidential Boeing BBJ and other VIP aircrafts used to fly high-ranking government officials and members of the defence force. Visiting heads of state and foreign dignitaries on official state visits fly into Waterkloof Air Force Base.

JH Consult and Pentagon Distribution used the latest innovation and technology in designing the CCTV system.

Multinet Systems won the tender for the installation and worked closely with Pentagon Distribution to provide a high-end CCTV solution.

Haiko Wörstman, Senior Project Manager for Multinet Systems said "We pride ourselves on doing High-end installations like this one and the support and service received from Pentagon has been superb." The installation will take place over a three-year period and includes a range of Bosch domes, fixed cameras and a full IP recording system. On completion, the system will provide security across the entire base.

Brendon Hall, Managing Director, Pentagon Distribution said, "It was with real excitement that we entered into this project. Not only because of the status of a National Keypoint installation, but also to partner Multinet during the integration process. The system has been professionally installed and commissioned and really confirms that when a system is designed properly and installed correctly the results speak for themselves"
